ALLIED AND COMPLEMENTARY MEDICINE (AMED)

Allied and alternative medicine is becoming increasingly popular in the U.S. Many health care professionals want to learn more about this subject but are unsure where to look. AMED is the answer. AMED is a database covering a wide variety of topics in the field of allied and alternative medicine. AMED contains articles from 400 journals, many of which have not been indexed by other biomedical sources. Although the scope is strongly European, the majority of titles are written in English. AMED provides articles on complementary medicine, physiotherapy, occupational therapy, rehabilitation, and podiatry from 1985 to the present. Coverage of palliative care begins in 1997.

For our primary clients this database may be accessed via the library's web site at <http://library.psc.gov>. To obtain a user ID and password please contact the library at 301-443-2673 or refdesk@psc.gov. All other users (as well as our primary clients) may access this database via workstations located in the library.

ANTIBIOTICS

Antibiotics are drugs that are prescribed to fight a wide variety of bacterial infections and have been used to conquer many deadly diseases. They are also used to fight infections in patients who have undergone surgery or who have serious body wounds. At the present time, there is an increasing number of infections caused by bacteria that have become resistant to antibiotics. Careful use of these drugs may reverse this trend. NCHS has data on the effects of antibiotics in Healthy People 2010.

GENDER DIFFERENCES IN MENTAL DISORDERS

Men and women are at differential risk for a number of mental disorders. There is a greater prevalence of depression and anxiety disorders among women whereas antisocial personality disorders and substance abuse occur more frequently in men. In addition, women are more likely than men to develop anorexia nervosa and bulimia. NIMH is currently funding studies on gender differences in depression.

HEALTH CARE QUALITY INFORMATION WEB SITE

AHRQ has recently launched a government web site, www.talkingquality.gov, to help consumer advocates, benefit managers, and state officials communicate with their audiences about health care quality. The site provides advice and examples on what to say about health care quality, how to say it, and how best to get that information to consumers. In addition, the site covers the entire process of quality reporting from initial planning to evaluation. A special feature is the Planning Workbook which is designed to help develop customized plans for presenting quality health care information.

HELPING CHILDREN EXPOSED TO SUBSTANCE ABUSE AND VIOLENCE

Often children exposed to violence and substance abuse are at risk for repeating these behaviors as adults. SAMHSA is currently funding the Children's Subset Study, a program that includes children of women enrolled in substance abuse programs, in order to break this cycle of intergenerational violence and substance abuse.

NURSING SHORTAGE

The nursing shortage has been identified as a critical national priority. Studies have shown that the demand for nursing services is growing faster than the number of trained nurses, placing an increasing strain on the nation's health care system and threatening the quality of health care. HRSA will award grants totaling more than $22 million to colleges, universities, and other organizations to increase the number of nurses with advanced degrees. In addition, another $8 million will be designated to repay educational loans of clinical care nurses who agree to work for two or three years in designated public or nonprofit health facilities facing a critical shortage of nurses.

GUIDE TO LIBRARY RESOURCES

JOBS RATED ALMANAC. Krantz, Les, Barricade Books, Inc., Fort Lee, NJ, 2002.
Ref-Gen HF 5382.5. U2 K8637

This book ranks 250 jobs considered to be the common jobs at which Americans work. It ranks jobs by using data from the Bureau of Labor Statistics and the Census Bureau as well as studies conducted by trade associations and industry groups. Six core job criteria are ranked in an “overall ranking” which is the sum of the six criteria. The six core job criteria are:

Environment	Income
Outlook	Physical demands
Security	Stress
